THE INTELLIGENCER.

WHEELING, FEBRUARY 14, 1900.

Meeting of the State League of Republican Clubs.

To the Republicans of West Virginia.

The time has come for aggressive action on the part of all adherents of our great party, which is now, as ever, the party of vital and positive principles. This year, as heretofore, Republicanism means patriotism. It therefore behooves the friends of good government everywhere to use all honorable means to perpetuate Republican principles by bringing about the election by overwhelming majorities of the Republican national, state and local nominees in the pending campaign. Such effort should not cease until victory is won.

In view of the great influence for good wielded by club organizations in distributing political literature and arousing enthusiasm upon the live questions of the day, a meeting of the West Virginia State League of Republican Clubs is hereby called for:

THURSDAY, MARCH 8, 1900.

to be held in the city of Parkersburg, W. Va., for the purpose of reorganization, consideration of plans of work for this year's campaign, election of delegates to the National League meeting, and for such other business as may properly come before it. Each club is entitled to five delegates, and it should also elect five alternates. Republicans in every county are urged to organize clubs at once, and send the name of each club, with lists of officers and delegates, without delay, to the secretary at Charleston.

Speakers of national reputation will be present to address the meeting.
By order of the Executive Committee,
WM. BURDETTE MATHEWS,
First Vice President,
D. E. HUGHES, Secretary.

Misleading Statements.

Referring to the refunding ordinance, which for political and other vicious reasons the Register is assailing, in spite of the fact that it was passed by a unanimous vote of both branches of the city council, that paper says: "Contrast the two propositions—the one, the plan we are now pursuing, which will see the city practically free from debt in ten years and in a still shorter time able to reduce taxation and the other, the refunding scheme, which will not permit the city to even reduce its present debt for ten years, nor to finally cancel it for thirty years, though paying an enormous sum in interest the while, and a total sum about twice as great as will be necessary if the present common sense plan is adhered to."

These statements are not only misleading, but unqualifiedly false. The ordinance specifically provides for the setting aside every year the sum of $15,000, which is a yearly reduction of the debt. At the end of ten years there will be accumulated the sum of $150,000 to apply towards the liquidation of the city's obligations, and the refunding of that portion of it that can be refunded, will result in a sensible decrease of interest charges.

The only question that is open to the voter and taxpayer is: Do you desire to escape an increase of the tax rate by voting for the ordinance, or do you not? The remedy and alternative are in the hands of the people. The Intelligencer believes reason will rule.

Spillation Versus Prosperity.

Bryan's anti-trust conference is holding its sessions in Chicago and pouncing the elusive Octopus at a great rate. Yesterday that supreme exponent of anarchy, ex-Governor Altgeld, the moaning voice of Massachusetts, as heard through George Fred Williams, and Congressman Sulzer, contributed to the vicious assault on capital that has been going on for two days. Wherever capital raised its head a brick was thrown at it. There was no distinction made between beneficial combinations of capital that have promoted the interests of many industries, and likewise benefited the skilled and the unskilled employe, but it was a general assault on money and success. There were frequent appeals to the spirits of Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln, but all the conjury that was exercised could not materialize them. What a disgusting play of demagoguery.

In sharp contrast to these spiritualistic senances was the address delivered by Attorney General Griggs in New York, Monday evening, who, speaking on the subject of capital and the charge that the Republican party was friendly to trusts, said:

"Glib-tongued orators, appealing to the baser passions, are fond of assailing the Republican party as a friend of capital—spelled with a big C—in order to give it a larger quality of dangerous monstrosity in the minds of those who don't possess any of it. So it has been the friend of capital always, but not in the sense in which it is accused. It has been the friend of capital as representing property, one of the things which our constitution declares no man shall be deprived of without due process of law.

"The Republican party has been, and is, the friend of capital considered as money. It has fought to preserve the money of the people, those with much and those with little, from dishonest depreciation. It rejoices in the millions upon millions of aggregated capital that fill the savings banks of the country, and the vast accumulations of the building and loan societies."

In speaking further on the subject the attorney general referred to the connection and the close sympathy of capital with labor, and rightly claimed that the Republican party welcomes capital. "What neighborhood," said he, "doesn't want it to come more and more, and settle with it? We like to see capital prosper, because when capital thrives, labor thrives. The Republican party is the friend of capital, because it is the friend of labor, and one cannot prosper without the other."

In the Democratic party as constituted to-day under Bryan's censorship, we have the policy of destruction and the Populist enmity to capital in any form, while the Republican party is an upholder of prosperity, and its policies are a constant encouragement to success.

New Railroad Work.

Following its custom of recent years the Railroad Gazette in its last issue presents its fifth semi-annual list of railroads building or proposed in the United States, Canada and Mexico, and a most gratifying showing it is, evidencing increased railroad activities. The first list appearing in this publication, February, 1898, contained reports of 167 new lines and extensions. The second in July of the same year had 275 new projects. In the third of February, 1899, there were 595 new projects, and in the fourth of July, 1899, there were more than 1,100 new lines and extensions. In the present issue the number of improvements of all kinds exceeds 1,250, and these are proposed or being made by about 1,030 different companies. By far the greater proportion of this new building is in the United States, which has new lines and improvements building or proposed numbering 1,157 by some 875 companies. In Canada there are over 160 different projects by about 120 companies, and in Mexico 45 new lines and extensions by 38 companies.

An interesting feature in connection with the work in progress is a resume of the work done in 1899, which shows 4,669 miles of road built in the United States by 284 companies; 656 miles in Canada by 19 companies, and 267 miles in Mexico by 10 companies. This is a marked improvement over the new mileage of recent years. In 1898 there was added 3,245 miles in the United States; 507 miles in Canada and 495 miles in Mexico. For the four preceding years the average in the United States was only about 2,000 miles a year, and we must go back to the years of 1891 and 1892 for figures similar to those of last year.

In 1899 nine companies in West Virginia are credited with building forty-four miles of road, while the new mileage under contract, together with projected lines, that will in all probability be constructed this year, amounts to something near 200 miles.

Women Remonstrance.

At the hearing of the woman's suffrage question before the senate committee, yesterday, a remarkable document was read against the granting of suffrage, the remonstrants not being opponents of that proposition of the male sex, but the Women's Association of Illinois opposed to the extension of suffrage to women, and it is well to pay some attention to what they say. In the exordium of their petition they relate that "it is now nine years since the Illinois remonstrants against woman suffrage had the honor to lay before your honorable body the plan of a coalition between the socialistic element of the labor union and the woman suffragists, and to enter a protest against such coalition being exploited in the halls of Congress. At that time the suffrage leaders denied that any such purpose of coalition existed, but driven from one position after another by the anti-suffragists in many states of this Union, they have at last, if the public prints report correctly, been constrained to accept the very tactics which they at first so very vigorously disclaimed."

The remonstrants claim that in view of these circumstances it becomes necessary to review the facts which constitute a continual temptation to the suffragists to appeal to revolutionary socialism for aid. "In the first place," say the petitioners, "we wish to call attention to the fact that, while every woman suffragist is not a socialist, every socialist is a woman suffragist, the doctrine of the equal and identical rights of men and women, and their equal and identical responsibilities towards the state, being the foundation of the entire political scheme of the Social Democracy. It is the avowed aim of this form of socialism to overturn all existing institutions, home, church and state.

This revolution, it may be stated in passing, is not only confidently looked forward to by foreign propagandists, but is accepted as the inevitable result of socialistic agitation by such American leaders as Professor George D. Herron, who has recently resigned his position upon the faculty of Iowa college because his teachings were found to be revolutionary, and who has since that time avowed in public that the social revolution is inevitable.

Now church and state might be overturned by military force, but the home is that bulwark of civilization which cannot be carried by any assault short of one which abrogates the immemorial right of woman to maintenance and protection within its sacred precincts, while she is carrying forward the work on which more than any other, the strength and perpetuity of the state depends, viz. the bearing and right rearing of citizens. That this is not too strong a statement of the worth of her work, the condition of France and Great Britain to-day forcibly demonstrates; the former nation by being reduced to the extremity of offering premiums for large families by her impending retrogression in the rank of nations, and the latter aghast at the possibility of losing her great colonial empire for want of civilized citizen soldiers. If there were homes in India instead of harems and zenanas, and those homes were loyal to her rule, her case would be far different.

The home then is the great bulwark of civilization against revolutionary socialism and woman suffrage, or differently stated—the industrial and political equality of woman is the agency relied upon by the socialists to undermine it."

The election of Thomas R. Bard, Republican, by the California legislature last week, to be United States senator, was in striking contrast to the scandals that cluster around Montana's new Democratic representative in the senate. The friends of Mr. Bard, who is a millionaire, boast that he did not spend so much as the price of a cigar to secure his election.

Governor Roosevelt has made it very plain to his friends that he will not be a candidate for the vice presidential nomination. The senate would be entirely too tame for the famous rough rider to govern.

The Kansas courts have declared unconstitutional the Populist law which required railroads to furnish free transportation to shippers of live stock.

STATE PRESS CLEANINGS.

In another part of to-day's paper appears the announcement of Thomas F. Barrett, who is a candidate for president of the State League of Republican Clubs. His letter in full of interest to a high and honorable office, and he pledges himself if honored with the nomination, to see that the League organizes into a formidable body to fight for Republican success. Mr. Barrett is an energetic fighter, and if he is made president of the League he will fulfill his mission, so far as lies in the power of the president.—Parkersburg News.

After a newspaper experience of about eighteen months, Thomas R. Horner has finally severed his connection with the Clarksburg News. He will complete the University law course, and is undecided as to the future.—Morgantown Post.

A man passed through here Sunday night with ninety-four cents of nitroglycerine. He was on his way to the Fink oil field. He wanted to stop here, but he was denied the privilege, and he drove on, after taking on a brace or two to keep off small pox.—Weston Independent.

Last Thursday was a splendid sample of a genuine spring day. The song of the pensive bird from our neighbor's barn yard gladdened our heart, with childish glee, and with happy strides we waded the mud to our workshop, but was headed off by Squire Dillon, who increased our ecstasy by informing us that he "positively heard frogs singing before daybreak." But—then—er—the hen story is a fact.—Lincoln Critic.

Congress will be asked to vote a medal to Lieutenant Andrew S. Rowan of Monroe county, who carried the message to Garcia. Congress could do no more graceful thing than to recognize in this manner this brave and modest hero of West Virginia.—McDowell Recorder.

West Virginia Journalism shows marked improvement within the past year. The Kanawha Gazette, Glenville Pathfinder and Nicholas Chronicle wear new dresses of type. The Ripley Mountaineer has doubled its size. The Lincoln Citizen is about to enlarge and is a nice, clean paper. The Wheeling Daily Intelligencer has greatly improved the character of its news and editorial departments and the Ritchie Gazette prints four pages at home, instead of two. West Virginia now has a set of newspapers of which any state might well be proud.—Clay County Star.

A great explosion occurred here the 30th of last month. No one was killed, but Captain Berry was very badly wounded in the pocketbook. Captain Berry and Lieutenant Geary started to bring a barrel of flour down Spread Mountain, assisted by fifteen men. After cutting down a five-foot oak and making it fast to a barrel of flour (or gunpowder, as Geary called it) they took two cables and proceeded to check it down the mountain. All went well until Berry let go, spit on his hands, and then there was a lightning flash and a terrible report, and that flour lies scattered from the path to Elk river.—Clay County Star.

The Harm Done to Kentucky.

Pittsburgh Times: Democrats and Republicans alike admit that the contentions that have grown out of the Goebel law have set the state of Kentucky back ten years in the world's progress. Men of capital are afraid to venture in the state. The Louisville & Nashville railroad, threatened with such things as the tearing up of its track and the abrogation of its franchise for the part it has taken against Goebell, is said to be considering the removal of its shops from Louisville to some other state. Timid people and those peaceably inclined are wishing they could be assured that a livelood elsewhere, not that they do not love the state, or do not appreciate the fact that there are countless thousands of delightful people here, but they are weary of the terrorism of partisanship. At the bottom of all this is the political system.

The direct cause of the difficulties of to-day is the Goebel law. How earnest Republicans are for the unobstructed right of franchise is testified by Governor Taylor, who said: "If I could have the Goebel law repealed and a fair election law put on the statute books I would gladly relinquish the governorship. If Mr. Goebel had ever come to me and given me his word as a gentleman that he would have his election law repealed, I would have yielded the office to what the people elected me without a content."

That Famous West Virginia Elm.

The great elm tree on the Hood farm, on the bank of the west fork of the Monongahela river, near Shinnston, promises to be made famous by the West Virginia novel, "Daughter of the Elm." It being supposed that is the tree that cuts so large a figure in the story. It seems this tree is already on record as the largest of its variety in the United States. An old citizen writes from Shinnston that some years ago a Philadelphia paper offered a prize for the largest water elm in the United States; that a citizen there measured this tree, forwarded a certificate of dimensions and was awarded the prize. He says the tree has a circumference of twenty-two feet three inches above the ground.

A lady at La Harpe, Ill., who has read the book, writes that the Elm farm was owned by her great grandfather, David Wamsley, over a hundred years ago, and that this farmer was hunted by him. This, if true, is even more extraordinary than the tree, for it seems beyond belief that such a growth could be made in a hundred years.

The Mystery of Dust at Sea.

It is a puzzling fact that the decks of sailing vessels show signs of dust at night, even if they be washed in the morning, and no work is done during the day. This is like indigestion, which creeps on one unawares. However, it comes, the only way to cure it is by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a remedy which never fails to cure dyspepsia in all its forms, as well as prevent malaria, fever and ague.

A Woman's Trials

Increase from girlhood to the grave.

The question of health is always before her. Thirty years of her life is a battle with menstruation, and not one woman in a hundred escapes the ills which lie in wait from month to month.

BISHOP DONAHUE

Appeals to Baltimore Congregations for West Virginia Missions.

Baltimore American of Monday: There were large crowds at the Cathedral services yesterday, the occasion being the visit of Rt. Rev. P. J. Donahue, bishop of Wheeling, who recounted features of his missionary life in West Virginia, and asked for contributions for the purposes of such missions. The bishop opened his discourse at the solemn mass by endeavoring to give his audience an idea of the extent of the diocese of Wheeling, over which he presides. It contains in all, in round numbers, 30,000 square miles. It is more than half as large as England, within a fraction of the area of Ireland and nearly five times as great in extent as the state of Maryland. It comprises a considerable portion of the old state of Virginia. The vast range of the Alleghenies, with its foothills and spurs occupy nearly all the state. A large part of it is still primeval forest which has never reached the woodman's axe. Many hundreds of square miles contain no human habitation. They are still the haunts of the deer, the fox, the catamount and the bear. There are about 25,000 Catholics in a total population of some three-quarters of a million. To these forty-two priests minister. Their labors, trials and hardships are worthy of the best ages of faith in any land. Many more clergymen are needed, and many institutions for the young and the unfortunate.

The preacher dwelt especially on the necessity of doing something for the convent of the Good Shepherd, which he had instituted a few weeks before.

Owing to the environment and the difficulties of travel, there are still many regions in West Virginia given over to lawlessness and disorder, but many places would compare favorably with the best localities in the United States. The Hatfield and McCoy's had brought dispute on a large section of the state. It was his work, he said, and that of his devoted clergy, to supplant the revolver and the Winchester by the reign of law.

A very generous response was made by the congregation to the bishop's appeal. In the evening he discoursed in less ecclesiastical style the vicissitudes of West Virginia missionary life.

West Virginian in Ohio.

Chic (Cincinnati): John Gordon Battelle, of Piqua, Ohio, is widely known among business men, having been for years a successful iron manufacturer. He is president of the Piqua Rolling Mill Company, president of the Piqua Wagon Company, vice president and general manager of the Cincinnati Corrugating Company. He is treasurer of the Midland Steel Company, Muncie, Ind.; director in the Columbus Iron & Steel Company, Columbus, Ohio, and president of the Association of Iron and Steel Sheet Manufacturers, etc. Colonel Battelle is a member of the military order of the Loyal Legion, Sons of the Revolution, the order of Elks and the Society of Colonial Wars. Although born in Clarkburg, West Virginia, Colonel Battelle rightfully belongs to Ohio, for his great-grandfather was one of the "Ohio Company" who came from Boston and settled in Marietta in 1788. That Piqua appreciates him was clearly shown when the announcement was made that he had been appointed an officer on the governor's staff. A number of citizens were called; they met, decided to present a sword to Colonel Battelle, bought the sword, secured a band and a speaker and the throng of people marched to his house and presented the magnificent gift, all within a few hours from the time it was first proposed. Nothing could have been more spontaneous. Loyalty is a distinguishing trait in the character of Colonel Battelle, and he is ever ready to aid his country, his state, his party, his city and his friends, when he knows they are in need of help from him.
